ABOUT KANSA & ITS PROCESS

Kansa is an alloy of tin, copper & zinc

The food stored in any Kansa utensil promotes holistic healing & well-being

To make Kansa ware, tin, copper & zinc are heated in a furnace together to form bronze

The molten metal is beaten manually into sheets

The sheets are moulded into shapes & designs as required, then polished

The artisans devotedly practice the making process of Kansa, which makes it one of a kind

By presenting these Kansa products, we intend to preserve the tradition of this craft along with its benefits.

KANSA SERVING BOWL

Perfect for serving meals, the Kansa serving bowl has excellent functionality and is crafted finely by local Indian artisans. Ayurveda recommends having all our three meals served from the Kansa Serving Bowl. Kansa, as an alloy of copper and tin, is a good conductor of heat. Thus, keeping your food warm over more extended periods helps aid efficient digestion and subsequent health benefits.
